The assigned award concerns the product Plein-Aircon 12V, the new 12V air conditioning system for vans and motorhomes, created for all those who want a perfect outdoor experience, in complete freedom and in contact with nature without the constraint of 220V connection or having annoying and expensive diesel generators. This is the starting point of a unique product, both in performance and energy consumption, totally made in Italy with a modern and refined design. Plein-Aircon 12V has a set of features, both design and technical, that have earned it the prestigious award.

The iF Product Design Award (Berlin) was introduced in 1954 and is among the most important international product design awards.
